AI SIMPLIFIED SERIES

How to make AI sound like YOU, not a robot

 TEMPLATE
INSIDE

The exact prompting trick that fixes flat, generic AI writing in one try.

Hi, I'm Kainat. Today we're fixing your AI's tone problem for good 🙌

 3 copy-paste prompts

 Works on any AI tool

THE CONCEPT

AI doesn't guess your tone. It reads for clues.

Gen AI tools have contextual understanding. That means they scan a few signals before writing a single word, and those signals shape the tone and style you get back.

MICRO WIN 💡

Your AI is always listening for tone clues, even when you send none.

If you don't specify a tone, the AI fills the gap with a guess based on your wording. That is why the same question can sound stiff one day and casual the next.

THE SPECIFICITY SIGNAL

Same task, one added phrase, completely different output.

✗ Generic Prompt

PROMPT

"Summarize this report into three short paragraphs."

WHAT YOU GET

Flat, robotic summary. No personality, reads like a machine wrote it.

✓ Tone-Specified Prompt

PROMPT

"Summarize this report into three short paragraphs, in a friendly, professional, easy to comprehend tone."

WHAT YOU GET

Warm, clear, human. Feels like a colleague explaining it to you.

1

Specify your tone and style directly, in specific words

Academic	→ scholarly and in-depth, like a professor
Persuasive	→ compelling and convincing
Sarcastic	→ dryly funny, like a wry comedian
Simple	→ like explaining to a curious 5 year old

COPY THIS PROMPT

Write [your task] in a tone that feels [specific descriptor], for an audience of [your audience]. Avoid jargon that would confuse someone new to the topic.

2

Give it a reference to imitate

Descriptors get you close. A reference gets you exact. Point the AI at a real example of the voice you want, and it will match the rhythm and word choice, not just the vibe.

EXAMPLE

"Consider the tone and style of interviews with history's most renowned climbers as a reference."

COPY THIS PROMPT

Help me write [your task]. Target audience: [your audience]. Keep the tone [descriptor]. Consider the tone and style of [a reference you admire] as a model to follow.

3

Iterate until it actually sounds like you

If the first draft feels bland, that is normal. Do not start over. Push the same thread further by adding more detail, more emotion, or a sharper direction.

Always Be Iterating.

COPY THIS PROMPT

This still feels too [generic / bland / stiff]. Make it speak to [specific feeling or audience], channel the spirit of [reference], and make the language less [X] and more [Y].

GUIDED VS GENERIC

Same product. Three tone moves later, a completely different voice.

☐ Generic, no tone direction

"Our new rock climbing apparel line is durable and designed for indoor and outdoor use. Available now in several colors."

☒ Descriptor + reference + one iteration

"Built for climbers who chase the next hold, not the easy one. Every stitch is made to move with you, indoors, outdoors, and everywhere in between. Channel the spirit of the legends. Reach for the summit."

TOOL PICKER

Which AI tool for tone research and brainstorming?

ChatGPT

Fast at generating multiple tone variations of the same line so you can compare side by side.

Best for: quick tone rewrites

Claude

Holds nuance well across a long conversation, good when you are iterating on tone step by step.

Best for: multi-round iteration

Gemini

Useful for pulling in current trends and real audience language when you brainstorm a reference.

Best for: audience and trend research

Perplexity

Strong at surfacing real examples of a tone in the wild, like actual interviews or articles to reference.

Best for: finding real reference material

SAVE THIS

Your 3-Step Tone Cheat Sheet

1

Specify the tone in exact words

Swap "casual" for "like talking to a friend"

2

Give it a reference to imitate

Point to a voice you admire and want to match

3

Iterate, don't restart

Push the same thread with more detail each round

Pro tip: build one tone reference per audience and reuse it every week.

Fix the tone on one thing you write weekly

1 Pick one task you repeat weekly: an email, a caption, a study note.

2 Open any AI tool and paste the template below.

3 Fill in your task, audience, and one tone descriptor.

4 Read the output. If it feels flat, iterate using Step 3 from this series.

COPY-PASTE PROMPT

Write [your task] in a tone that feels [specific descriptor], for [your audience]. Consider the tone of [a reference you admire] as a model.

One Question For You

Which tone descriptor from slide 5 will you try first?

- A Scholarly, like a professor
- B Dryly funny, like a wry comedian
- C Like explaining to a curious 5 year old
